Diploma Currant

Received World's Fair Diploma

This valuable red currant received the World's Fair Diploma for being the most valuable and best red currant. It is a very vigorous grower, the bushes being larger than other varieties, and the foliage healthier and hardier. Both Clusters and berries are of extra large size, the largest we have ever seen. And contrary to what might be expected of such large berries, they contain very few seeds, are firm and of exceedingly high quality. The flavor is delicious. This currant is very attractive in appearance and commands a higher price in market than other varieties. We have large plantings of it at Green's Fruit Farm and it usually brings us two cents more per pound than any other kind. It's season is medium-Late.

W. C. Barry says: "Diploma currant is large, solid and of good quality. It will be valuable for its size and solidity."

Prof. H. E. VanDeman, the noted pomologist, says: "Diploma currant was exhibited by Jacob Moore at the Pan-American, 1901. I was a judge of the first exhibit there. It was my duty and pleasure to examine carefully five baskets of this currant, sent at different dates for a month, some on branches as grown. Diploma currant is of attractive appearance, both clusters and berries being very large. The quality is good. It is a currant of unusual promise."

Brown Brothers Nursery Co. say: "We have tested Diploma currant on the table with sugar, and find it of delicious flavor. Considering its extra large size, productiveness and quality, it must become a valuable variety."
